Jerry and Tuffy were sitting on the back stoop Spring was in the air and the shouts and whistles of school children could be heard echoing off the street There seemed to be a hustle and bustle everywhere, and the two little mice were having a touch of Spring Fever. They both felt full of ambition This was such a strange state of affairs that they were both bewildered

"I wonder what's the matter with me?" questioned Jerry "I even feel like working."

"Working?" squeaked Tuffy. "What does that mean? It has a horrible sound."

"Well," pondered Jerry, "it's sort of hard to explain. Generally, if you work, you take a job . . . and that means doing something for someone else that they are too lazy to do for themselves. Of course, there is skilled work; too that means doing something that you do better than others."

"Humph," sniffed Tuffy, who had listened very carefully. "That's a crummy idea I certainly don't want to do anyone else's dirty work, and, as for doing something better than anyone else . . . that's a laugh! What could a little mouse do?"

"I don't really know," answered his pal, "but there must be something. I think I'll start reading the newspapers. Maybe if someone wants some mice to work, they'll say so in the paper."

"You're nuts," snickered Tuffy. "Why work when we don't need anything? C'mon, they've just put a new mousetrap in the pantry, and there's a nifty piece of cheese in it. I was going to keep it for myself, but from the way you're acting, you're the one that needs a square meal."

The mice entered the house. Jerry took a straw from the kitchen broom, and tickled the trap . . SNAP! it went Then the two lifted the cheese out of the trap. They had a fine meal.

The snap of the mousetrap had been heard by the lady of the house. The mice hid in the corner to watch her come running. She always got so angry when the little mice stole the cheese out of her traps, and Jerry and Tuffy loved to tease her "Better luck next time!" they squeaked, and then scampered off The lady's shoes followed them . . . but the lady wasn't in them. The little mice dodged the shoes. "My, what big feet!" giggled Tuffy, as he and Jerry ducked into their hole . . . "Her aim gets worse and worse," gasped Jerry. "Boy, she sure doesn't like us much!"

That night when Jerry and Tuffy went out for their midnight snack, the evening paper was lying on the table Jerry ate a slice of cake, fresh from the cakebox. While he ate, he sat on the newspaper. Jerry was a tidy little mouse, and didn't like to scatter crumbs around. Suddenly, he called to Tuffy, "Hey, look, here's just the thing! It says right here in the paper that they need mice to do important work."

"What kind of work?" questioned the suspicious Tuffy.

"I don't exactly know," said Jerry. "I'll read some more . . . Well, it says that a Professor Flubdub is trying to find out which animals are the smartest He gives them tests and stuff . . . sorta like a class in school. The Professor has already tested a lot of animals, but he needs some mice . . . and can't find any . . . Oh Boy, it sounds like just the thing!" exclaimed the excited Jerry.

"Wait a minute!" spouted Tuffy. "Maybe he can't find any mice 'cause no mice would be goofy enough to work . . . Why don't you just run over and tell this bird we're the smartest animals, 'cause we're such 'wise guys.' Ha! Ha!"

"O.K., go ahead and laugh," sighed Jerry. "If you won't come, I'll go alone."

Jerry was up bright and early the next morning. Tuffy got up, too, saying, "If you're going to find out how smart you are, I'd better go with you. When that Professor throws you out . . . I can catch you."

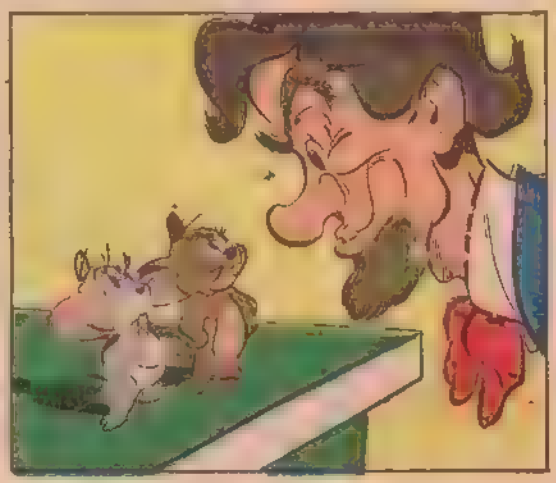
Jerry and Tuffy started walking, and were soon in the center of town. There stood a large brick building. Over the massive doors was printed in large letters, "YE JOLLY OLDE COLLEGE OF ALL KINDS OF KNOWLEDGE." Jerry tugged at Tuffy, "C'mon, this is where the Professor works."

They walked up to the doors, and waited for someone to open them. Soon, a gangly old man with a pointed beard, large white teeth, and high button shoes entered the building. "Let's follow him," whispered Jerry. "Maybe he is Professor Flubdub."

The mice followed the strange man down a long hall. When he went through a door, they sneaked into a room with him. The room was painted white, and all sorts of odd looking boxes and cages were scattered around. The Professor wandered about the room, singing,

"My name is Flubdub,
I bathe in a tub,
And eat my soup with a fork. .
. . . . . ."

There was more to it, but Jerry and Tuffy couldn't make it out. "Gosh," whispered Jerry, "this guy acts like he's daffy!"



"I'm getting out of here," said Tuffy, starting for the door . . . But, just then Jerry sneezed, "Kerrrchoooo!" . . . and a voice said,

"Ah ha, now isn't this nice,
Two little Mice!
So happy to meet you.
Come here let me greet you."

The Professor smiled, and all his large teeth showed. Some were white, some were gold, and they all glinted alarmingly in the bright light. "Goodbye," squeaked the two frightened mice. "We had a lovely time, and are just leaving."

"Oh, don't do that.
I have no cat.
I'll give you some cheese,
If you'll hop on my knees."

The Professor pulled a crumpled package out of his pocket. Jerry and Tuffy wrinkled their noses, and could smell some wonderful cheese. No mouse can resist cheese when he's hungry, and our little heroes were hungry. They stifled all their misgivings, and hopped up into the Professor's lap Before they could move, a hand picked them up, and deposited them in a clean, warm cage . . . "CLICK," went the door.

. . The Professor stood outside, rubbing his hands together, and chuckling,

"Now don't go away,
For I'd rather you stay
We'll have great fun,
And, it's just begun."

He turned and walked out of the room.

"Yeah," grumbled Tuffy. "We'll have great fun! He means he'll have fun. The joke's on us. You and your ideas! Well, my brilliant classmate, the first lesson's over. Just open that door, and let's go home."

Jerry felt pretty silly. "Aw, quit kidding me. You know we're locked in." The mice sat in moody silence for a while. Then, Jerry said, "Tuffy, do you smell cheese?"

"Uh huh, I do . . . Look, . . . there's a piece right up there!" Sure enough, on a shelf, out of their reach, was a large slice of cheese. Tuffy climbed up on Jerry's shoulders, and grabbed the prize. They ate every bit of it, then curled up and took a nap.

They were awakened by a loud bell ringing in their ears. It sounded just like the telephone bell at home. Their mousehole apartment was right next to the bell box. The cheery sound made them feel more at ease in their queer surroundings Suddenly, the cage door opened . . . and the two mice dashed through it . . . but into another cage ! ! The strange Professor was holding this cage.

In the middle of the cage was a tiny merry-go-round, and on the merry-go-round were all sorts of sugar candy. The Professor began to sing,

"The ride will be dandy,
You'll have sugar candy.
Just hop on,
Come flop on
The merry-go-round."

Jerry and Tuffy loved candy, so the first thing they knew they were on the merry-go-round. It began to turn . . . faster . . . and faster . . . until it was almost spinning. Jerry and Tuffy had often played on the victrola at home, and this was easier than dancing on a victrola record. When they began to feel a little dizzy, they just started running around the platform in the opposite direction from which it was turning. Gradually, the merry-go-round slowed down, and Jerry and Tuffy hopped down with their mouths full of candy.

The Professor jumped up and down, and clapped his hands.

"You two are so wise,
You'll win the grand prize.
Now the last test,
To prove you're the best"

He put the little mice in the oddest contraption in the world It was a glass house, full of doors and hallways that seemed to lead nowhere. "Hee, Hee," tittered the Professor,

"Come, run about,
There's a way to get out.
If you knew it,
You could do it!"

The poor little mice tried one way after another, but they always ended up right where they started Finally, Jerry said, "You know, Tuffy, if we keep marking the wrong ways, we'd find out which one was right . . . I know . . . give me a couple of your whiskers . . ." Tuffy gave Jerry a couple, and Jerry pulled out a few of his own. Then, they split the hairs into smaller pieces. Now they were ready. Every time they started down a corridor, or out a door, they would mark it with a bit of whisker. They had soon tried all the ways except one.

"This must be it!" they squeaked, and they ran for all they were worth. And indeed it was the right way! They soon found themselves out of the box, . . . and they dashed for the door of the room!

The Professor called after them,

"Oh, please don't go, . . .
There's a prize to bestow.
I know you'll adore it
Do wait a bit for it!"

"NUTS! ! !" squeaked the mice . . . and they kept running all the way home. When they arrived in their apartment, Tuffy turned to Jerry, "You forgot your prize," he teased. ". . . but I didn't"

"Wh . . Whaaat did you get?" asked Jerry inquisitively. "I don't see anything"

"Oh!" laughed Tuffy, "I have you . . . and YOU'RE A PRIZE FOOL ! ! ! !"

OUR GANG

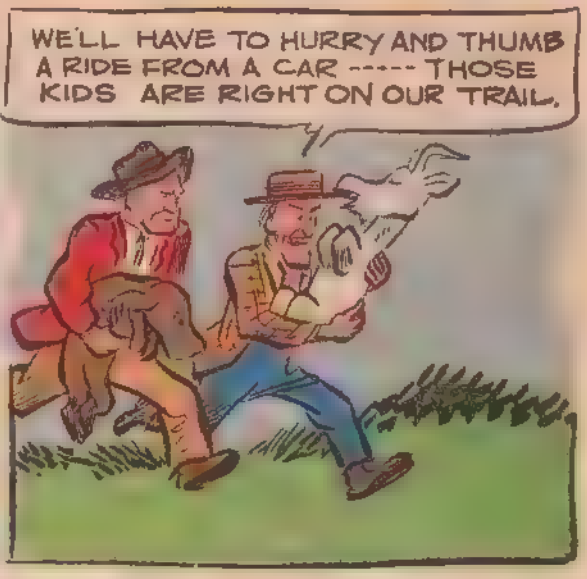
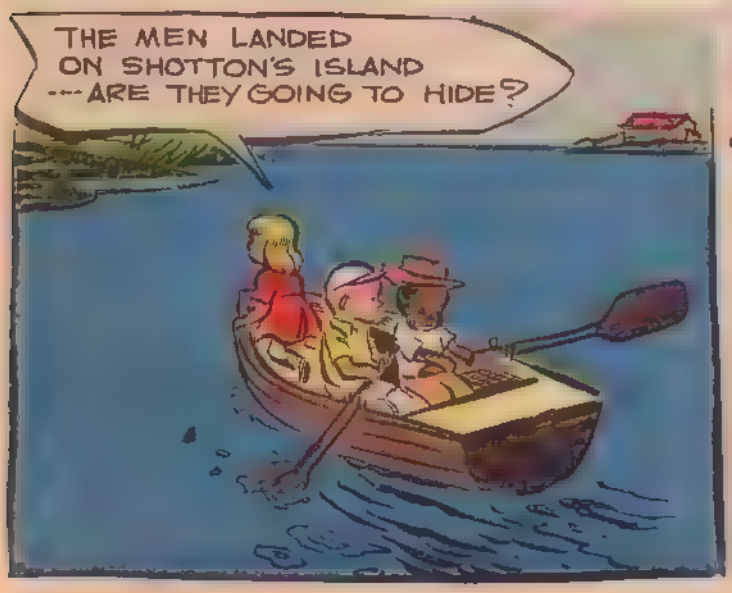
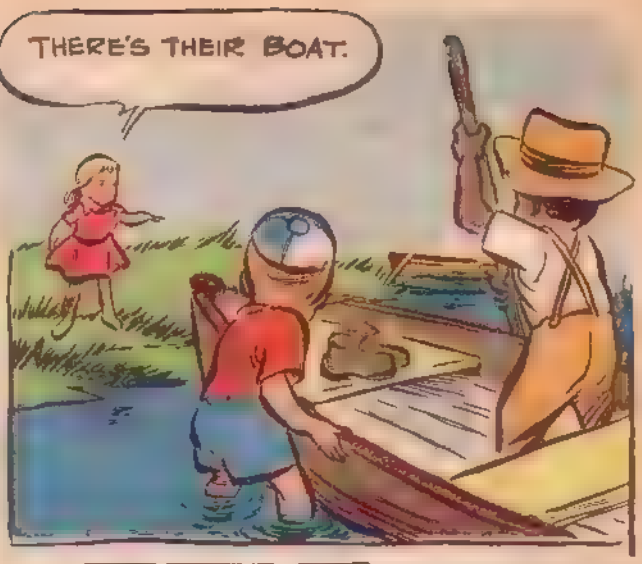
TWO DISHONEST CARNIVAL WORKERS HAVE STOLEN JULIP, THE GOAT, AND HORTENSE, THE DOG --- THEY BELIEVE HORTENSE CAN TALK BUT THE DOG HAS MERELY SWALLOWED A MIDGET RADIO..... JULIP HAS EATEN AN ALARM CLOCK AND THIS RINGS OCCASIONALLY.



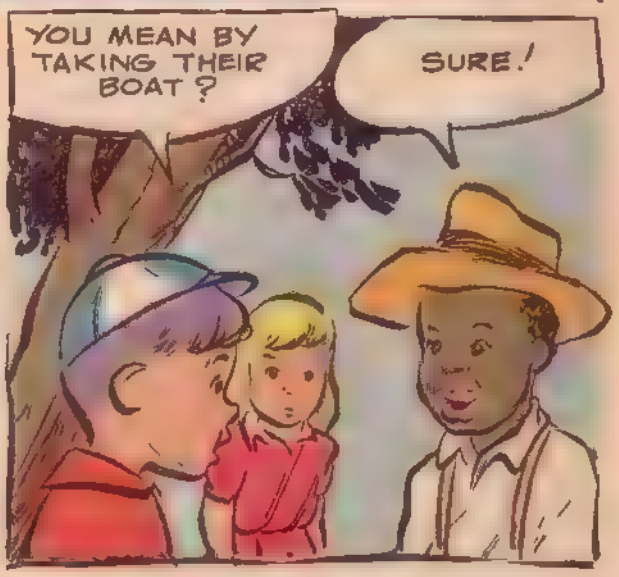


THAT MEANS THEY'RE HEADING FOR A ROAD —AND THE ISLAND HAS NONE.

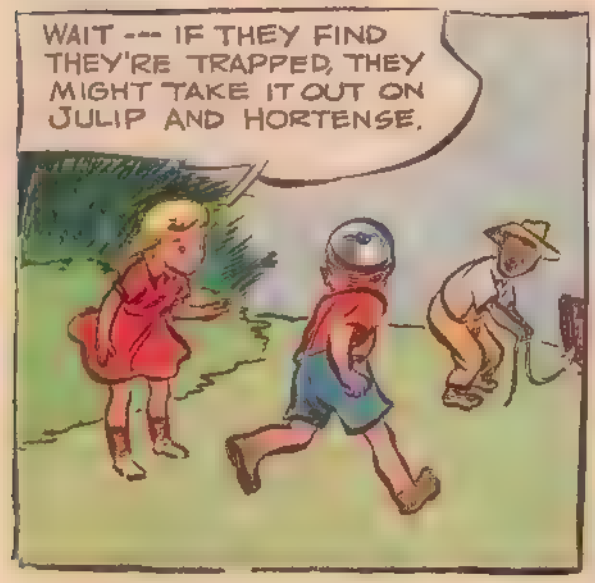


THERE'S THEIR BOAT.

YOU KNOW, WE CAN TRAP THEM HERE.



YOU MEAN BY TAKING THEIR BOAT?
SURE!

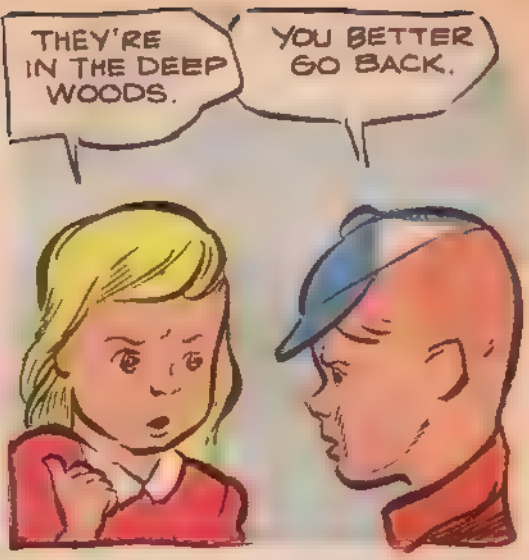


WAIT --- IF THEY FIND THEY'RE TRAPPED, THEY MIGHT TAKE IT OUT ON JULIP AND HORTENSE.

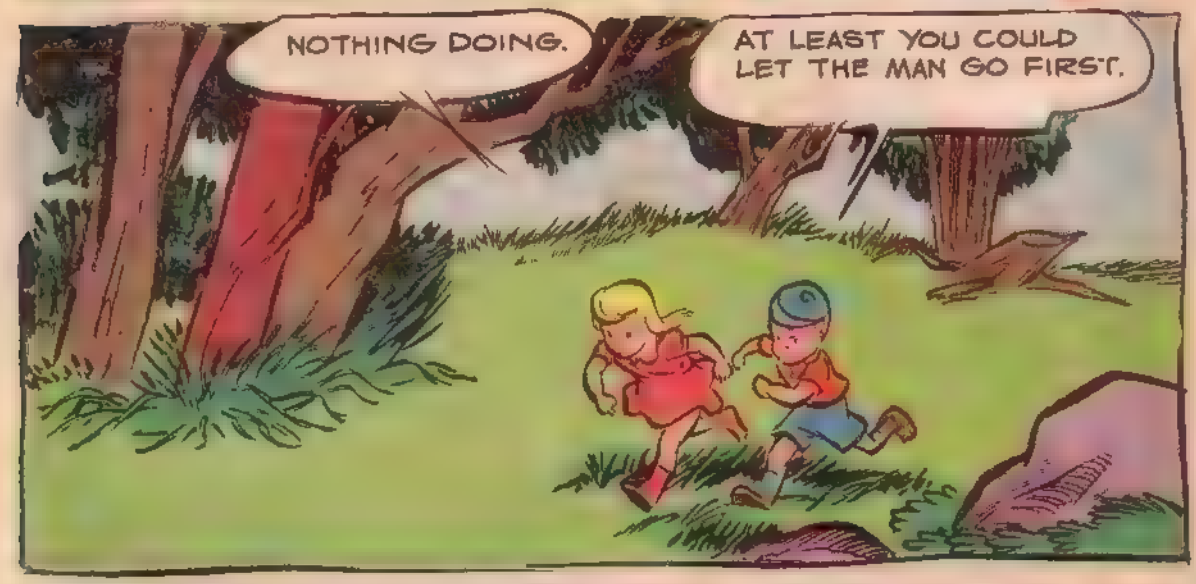
IT'D BE BETTER TO GET JULIP AND HORTENSE FIRST.

ONE OF US TAKE ONE BOAT IN TOW AND ROW OUT IN THE OTHER A LITTLE WAY FROM SHORE
YOU CAN DO THAT, ANA, --- WHILE TWO-BY-TWO AND I LOOK FOR THEM.
WHAT?! YOU CAN'T DO THAT TO ME — —— I CAN'T ROW.
WHAT?! YOU ROWED PART WAY OUT!
WELL, I WANT TO LOOK FOR THOSE MEN--- THEY MIGHT HURT HORTENSE OR JULIP.
HEY!
I'LL HAVE TO GET HER – WE'RE ENGAGED TO BE MARRIED IN TWENTY YEARS.
GUESS I'LL HAVE TO GET THESE BOATS OFF SHORE SO THOSE MEN CAN'T USE THEM.

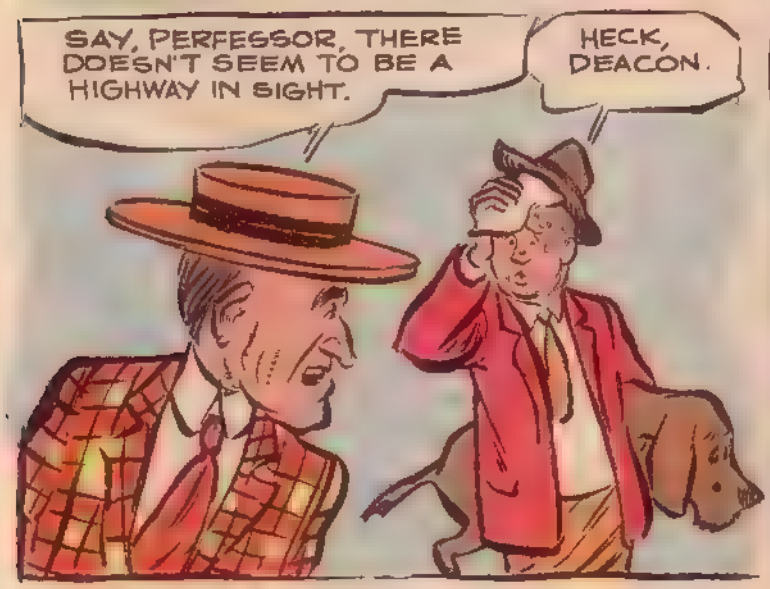
THERE'S A FOOTPRINT!



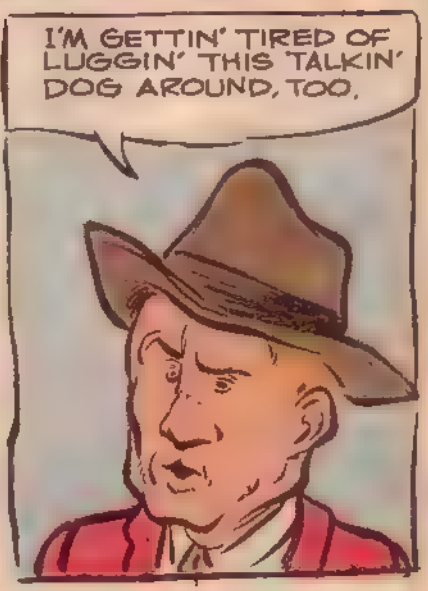
THEY'RE IN THE DEEP WOODS.
YOU BETTER GO BACK.



NOTHING DOING.
AT LEAST YOU COULD LET THE MAN GO FIRST.

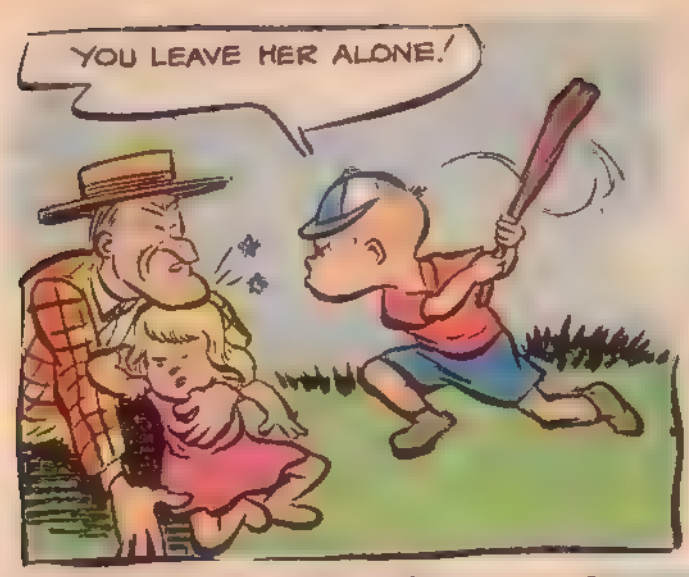


SAY, PERFESSOR, THERE DOESN'T SEEM TO BE A HIGHWAY IN SIGHT.
HECK, DEACON.



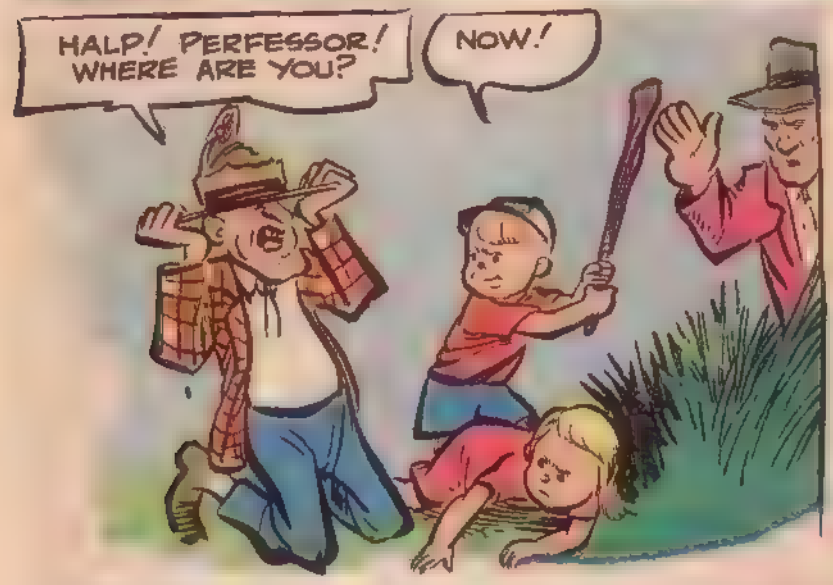
I'M GETTIN' TIRED OF LUGGIN' THIS TALKIN' DOG AROUND, TOO.

BESIDES IT AIN'T SAID NOTHIN' LATELY.
COME ON, TALK! SAY SOMETHING!
YOU LEAVE HORTENSE ALONE!
SHHHH---
IT'S THOSE KIDS! IF WE DON'T CATCH THEM, THEY WILL SET THE LAW ON US.
AFTER 'EM! NAB 'EM!
IT SURE IS A BUSY DAY.
GOT ONE!



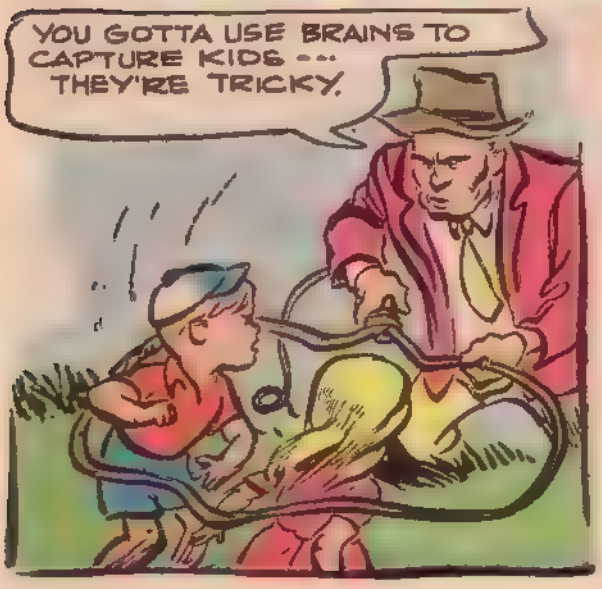
YOU LEAVE HER ALONE!

NOBODY GOES BEATIN' UP ANASTASIA!



HALP! PERFESSOR! WHERE ARE YOU?
NOW!

NOW!



YOU GOTTA USE BRAINS TO CAPTURE KIDS --- THEY'RE TRICKY.

NOW TO TIE 'EM UP OVER HERE.

WITH THE KIDS TIED UP NOW, WE'LL TIE THE ANIMALS NEAR AND THEN GO LOOK FOR A WAY OUT.

LOOK THERE'S WATER ALL AROUND.
